HAPPY HOLIDAYS! TWO GAMES END!!

Boris and Ms Nar wish you and yours happy holidays and good gaming for the New Year.

Congratulations to Rick Copeland for winning our third chariot race and to Dave Anderson for winning our second ADVANCED CIVILIZATION game. This unexpectedly opens another page for more mayhem. SETTLERS has a quorum, so that's primary. House Rules can be found on my website (Ref 1). BALKAN WARS (Ref 2), DUNE, and AGE OF RENAISSANCE will be back ups if the quorum falls apart.

This is our "gala holiday issue", containing four more pages than usual. A special feature is our "Hall of Fame" pages listing all the winners of the games we've run here for the last 16.5 years. It also gave us room to publish Alan Bargender's house rules for SOURCE OF THE NILE.

STANDBY ALERT! The following position is available: AIR BARON: ARA.

BORIS'S BULLETIN BOARD

TROOP MOVEMENTS Greece disbands F COR.

GREECE (Anderson): PPPHHHHAAAAATTT!!!!!! I survived...I really lost this game turn 1 when after negotiating with Albania. He still builds 2 fleets and bounces me in the Gulf of Corfu. Greece lives by the islands and dies by its' island empire and so it went with me. Turkey and I could never see eye to eye on it. I needed a secure zone on Cye, Rhodes, and Sma. occupied with my fleets before I could turn North against Serbia or the rump state of Albania. After Phil made a strange move that had it worked in the 1st move would have left Saloniklia vulnerable. He after it failed turned Back on Albania and stabbed him. on my part I decided to help albania live (until I could secure my island empire) by trying to keep a balance of power in the region by just picking on Skopje every now and again. I really enjoyed trying to keep Bulgaria alive against the R/T alliance. I only late in the game finally succeed in bottling up Turkey but by then it was too late for the game to be turned from the inevitable Rumanian win and Phil was the only one who could effectively oppose it. Phil went after me and I crumbled down back to my island empire. The only center that ever stayed neutral till the end was the island I should have gotten the 1st year --Crete.

RUMANIA (R. Fisher): Hurrah, the war is over! Man this game is so much more fun when you win. I'd like to thank all the little people who helped me get here: Rick (Bul) having the heavy weight in the center of the board makes Bul everybodys fine target, sorry you were knocked out so quickly but it comes with the territory. Next Phil (Ser): See what threats get you, next time maybe you'll play nice; but I must thank you for your fanatical obsession with Greece: you were the blade on my bulldozer. And Dave (Gre) thanks for the advice, observations and mostly for keeping Turkey my ally instead of letting him foil any of my plans. On my two allies, Wayne (Alb) for drawing Serbias' wrath and then refusing to die thus keeping his attention; and last but not idellinately not) least Kevin (Tur) for being a steady patsy, no ALLIE, (usually the role I fill), for helping me refine my tactics and for an insurance supply of dot in case Serbia found his Backbone there at the end, hey the way I see it your still two stabs up on me, but thanks for being there. All in all it was great fun and I look forward to playing again with all of you.

TURKEY (K. Wilson): Congratulations to Ron. It was a well fought and deserved win. Our alliance at least worked for one of us. Although, I'll admit, had my original plans worked as I had wanted, it might have been to my advantage and not to yours. My original plan had been to work some deal with Greece regarding the islands and once I had gained a little growth, see if I could get Albania and Serbia to help keep you under control. The one common thread to our desires and needs was the elimination of Bulgaria, which we successfully accomplished. Sorry Rick. My problem was Greece ditched our early agreement, almost from the beginning. And I found myself out of position when he did. It took the rest of the game to get things under control there and by the time I had Greece off my front step, you were beyond control. You let the rest of us do the fighting while you slowly but surely gained ground and centers. A patient and successful strategy.

misunderstandings we have to be honest and clear in our communication', the Duke replied. 'And besides, the Pope hasn't been very communicative lately'. No, that was true, Svenotti thought. But attacking the Papacy? Well, it could go well. The Duke had proved to be a great Commander before with swift, decisive acting. OK, time to prepare to be subject for the wrath of God... To the Duke Svenotti said 'A very wise decision, Sir. Please tell me when I can be to assistance next time'. Svenotti left the room thinking if this would make it easier for the Duke to get some sleep.

CLASSIFIEDS

The advisor enters the office belonging to the Duke of Venice. The Duke is already in place and there are signs of that not much sleep has been had by the Duke lately. As the advisor comes into range, the Duke rises his head and his face expression reveals his troubles. He says 'Good that you could turn up, Svenotti, I have been thinking about our close future. Italy seems to be changing. Austria's influence is suddenly shrinking and there are fleets all over'. 'But note, my dyre Duke, not many of them are Venetian', Svenotti filled in. 'Remember what our strengths are, the proud naval force has always been the strength of Venice. Don't let that be forgotten'. 'No', replied the Duke, 'I have actually ordered another fleet build in Venice. Let's only hope that it is not interpreted in the wrong way by the Ottoman. I have told my General that they should make a point in the form of a strong commitment, to see to that there will be no doubts'. Svenotti picked up the thread 'Ah, Sir, who have you picked as the target, to satisfy Turkey?' The Duke hesitated for a while, the deep believer he was, 'It is the Papacy'. Svenotti was stunned, 'Do you mean that? Who will ally with us if we attack the Church?' 'I know, it is crazy, but it was the only alternative. To avoid any

PRESS:

The Blue Max, deciding not to go around in futility trying to catch the leader, has decided to take a rest for him and his horses and wishing to himself: "I wish I could have done this to Indy maybe, I will get to time enough to recycle those metal spikes for my chariot....!"

As Indy guided his galloping team into the turn, he was able to look closer at his wounded horse. Gallus was straining to keep up, but so far had not broken the running rhythm of the team. Smart horse.

Then Indy turned his gaze past the wrecks and towards the next turn. Hmm. Blue Max had halted. Indy could see no reason for his halt.

"Great Caesar's Ghost! Is that an Ax?"

Indeed, the Blue Butcher was smiling and wetting the blade of a great two-headed ax.

Indy was outraged. "Zeus" he thought. "My first run on the pro circuit and now I gotta pass a guy with an ax! Nobody told me about any axes! Who made these rules, a Phoenician???"

ADVANCED CIVILIZATION

BABYLON WINS!
TURN 17!!

Cast:

Af: Phil McCabe Ib: Paul Zieske Cr: Steve Llewellyn As: Phil Reynolds
Ba: Dave Anderson Eg: Mike Scott GM: Flint Webb Asst. GM: Tom Butcher

General Comments:

It has been fun. All of you that stuck it out did very well. I was especially impressed at the way Crete used Military, and how Assyria, Egypt and Babylon used Roadbuilding. I had always considered Roadbuilding and Military undesirable civilization advances.

Babylon won decisively, having been able to buy all the civilization advances. There was a less than 300 victory point difference between second and 4th place, and the presumed 4th place player lost two cities at the end due to Civil War. I say "presumed 4th place player" because in the final check of the Civilization victory points I discovered that Africa did not buy Law and yet I managed to allow them to buy Democracy and Philosophy (both require the purchase of Law first). The error is mine for not noticing it when it happened, but with only a 16 victory point difference it could have made a difference in who came in third.

Rule Interpretations

The house rules don't really cover the situation where the first faction is entirely selected by the beneficiary. For future games I would suggest that the house rule for Civil War should read: 30.4123 After the primary victim completes his selection, the GM will determine who will be the beneficiary and make their selection such that the smaller faction is closest to the beneficiary. The idea is to keep the back-and-forth to a minimum during adjudication.

17.10 Trading

1. Iberia trades Gold 17, Silver 2w + Oil 3 to Egypt for Gems 3D, Spice x + Cloth z
2. Iberia trades Gems j, Gems 3D + Timber i to Africa for Spice 27, Cloth 2j + Iron 8
3. Babylon trades Ivory 1d, Spice 2i + Iron e, Iron f to Iberia for Cloth 2o, Cloth z + Cloth 2j

17.11 Resolve Calamities

Treachery (Africa): Not traded. Thapsus is reduced.

Civil War (Egypt): The count in stock is: Af 35 (thanks to the treachery), Eg 33, Cr 27, Ba 24, Ib 20. Eg has Philosophy and 56 unit points on the board. The first faction therefore consists of 15 unit points that will be given to Africa. The house rules don't really cover the situation where the first faction is entirely selected by the beneficiary. Attempting to stay with the spirit of the current house rule, Egypt selects all cities, Stwa, EDes, Petr and Alex. The current house rules says that the beneficiary's faction must be contiguous. For the beneficiary's faction I select tokens contiguous to the cities selected in the victim's faction: 3 Memp, 2 Cyra, 2 Fayu, 2 UEgy, 2 Ptol, 2 Sina, 2 Midt. This latter faction is what is transferred to the Africa.

Flood (Babylon): Babylon loses 3Sume, 3 Baba, 1 Meso.

Piracy (Crete): Not traded. Crete loses Cori and Mile. Africa loses Tripoli, and Iberia loses Sardinia.

Egypt has 4T, 8C, reduces Tanl and Alex to end up with 13T, 6C.

PBM SYSTEM & HOUSE RULES

I. PBM system

A. The map has no coordinate system so here is how hexes are identified. Each row of hexes from the board's northern edge to it's southern is given an identification letter starting with A. As there are more than 26 rows of hexes those after row Z are given double letters in the form AA, BB, CC, and so on south to row LL. Thus, the row north of Khartoum is A. Kilwa is in row S, and Capetown is in row LL. To identify individual hexes within a row they are numbered west to east (left to right). The westernmost playable hex in every row is number 1 and each hex to the east is increased by 1. Keep in mind that half-hexes are playable. So, Khartoum is hex B21. the hex 1 west of Brass is 11, Quillmane is Z17, and Durban is J9.

B. Rules 1.0 through 26.0 are in use. 12.2 is modified to make Guides more useful. Guides will only desert on a roll of "1" after getting the party lost rather than automatically. For purposes of victory conditions (7.0), players will not lose accumulated victory points when their explorers die. They will start a new explorer with 81000 as at the game's start.

C. Players are required to pick a default Native Policy at the beginning of the game. The policy can be changed or made conditional at the players' wishes but will be used by the GM in the absence of any other instructions.

D. Players will not know their disaster before submitting the move for the turn. It's one of the vagaries of pbem. Feel free to submit conditionals if you like.

II. House Rules

A. Individualized Explorers

1. The GM rolls one die for an advantage and one die for a disadvantage for each explorer. The players see these rolls before selecting an explorer specialty and outfitting.

2. Advantages/disadvantages are:

a. Leadership: Advantage - can possibly overcome desertion or "bad omens" by force of character and personal charisma. Whenever problem arises, roll 1 die; prevent desertion, or compel obedience in spite of disaster card messages, on a roll of 1. Disadvantage - Irritates (or fails to inspire) his men. Whenever any disaster card causes harm to the expedition, roll 1 die; on a roll of 1 his men will interpret this as a sign of impending doom and begin to desert.

b. Directional Sense: Advantage - add one to die roll in determining whether he becomes lost. Cannot be used in conjunction with any additions for the skill of a guide. Disadvantage - Subtract one from die roll in determining whether he becomes lost (also does not apply when following a guide).

c. Survival: Advantage - is able to "hunt" even if unarmed, gathering edible plants or snaring game. Adds one to his die roll (but not those of his askaris) when hunting. Disadvantage - If explorer has no guide or askari to show him what to hunt he cannot do it alone. Subtract one from hunting die roll for results of his own hunting when he does not have askari or guide.

d. Health: Advantage - Subtracts 1 from die roll when starving or sick to test for sickness, recovery, or death. Disadvantage - Adds 1 to die rolls as above.

e. Physique: Advantage - Can carry one extra ration, musket, or gift rather than the normal load of 10. When riding horse or camel the explorer's larger size reduces its payload by two rations, gifts, or muskets. Disadvantage - Carries one less gift, ration, or musket than normal, i.e. 9 rather than 10. However, when riding a horse or camel the explorer's smaller size allows an extra 2 rations, gifts, or muskets to be carried.

f. Diplomacy: Advantage - Rolls an extra die when determining number of gifts needed to impress chief in negotiations (rule 14.0). When trading with natives (rule 14.0) rolls an extra die to the price of each item. Gets the most favorable of the die rolls in each case. Disadvantage - Rolls an extra die as for "advantage" but uses the least favorable result in each case, e.g. rolls three dice when negotiating and multiplies the number of gifts by the smallest of the die rolls.

3. The GM rolls one die for an advantage peculiar to each explorer: the die roll determines the skill area in which his advantage lies. Another die is rolled to determine the skill area in which there is a disadvantage. If the same skill area is affected by both rolls, the player may accept the cancellation or have the GM reroll for disadvantage.
